Bankruptcy and insolvency attorney Stephen M. Packman has been designated a Fellow of INSOL International, a worldwide federation of insolvency professionals, successfully completing INSOL's intensive, nine-month "Global Insolvency Practice Course."

Chair of the Bankruptcy (Debtor/Creditors' Rights) Practice Group at Archer, P.C., in Haddonfield, N.J., Packman is a member of the inaugural class of INSOL Fellows – 19 professionals from Australia, the Cayman Islands, Hong Kong, The Netherlands, the United Kingdom and the United States. Packman successfully completed rigorous academic and practical coursework including oral and written examinations, case studies and research papers, and a collaborative, online case simulation.

INSOL International is a London-based, worldwide federation of national associations of accountants and lawyers specializing in turnaround and insolvency. INSOL comprises more than 40 member associations and 9,500 professional members, with ancillary groups representing the judiciary, regulators, lenders and academics. Formed in 1982, INSOL is the leading insolvency association in the world, providing research, education, policy advisement, and global exchange of information on insolvency issues.

The "Global Insolvency Practice Course" is offered by INSOL in conjunction with professors and lecturers from universities, institutions and firms all over the globe. Its worldwide network of insolvency professionals and academics put INSOL in a unique position to draw the most qualified and reputed scholars on the legal and financial elements of restructuring. During nine months starting last spring, Packman received extensive face-to-face instruction, including sessions in Leiden, The Netherlands, and Shanghai, China, as well as online and at-home instruction and assignments.

Through this rigorous course of study, INSOL Fellows gain thorough insight into the major legal and financial issues, debates and theories in international insolvency, along with the analytical and practical skills to apply international insolvency rules in practice. The course focuses on development of professional skills to anticipate, prevent, analyze and solve legal problems arising in international insolvency practice.

In addition to heading the firm's Bankruptcy Practice, Packman also serves as co-Chair of Archer's newly formed International Law Practice Group. The Group represents clients in insolvency and litigation matters, business acquisitions and dispositions, negotiation and drafting of real estate and other development agreements, formation of joint ventures, and other commercial and corporate representation throughout North, Central and South America, Europe, Australia, New Zealand, the Middle East and Asia.

Archer, P.C., is a full-service law firm with more than 175 lawyers serving Fortune 100 clients, small to medium-sized businesses and individuals for more than 80 years.
