Overview: Whether your workplace has continued in person throughout the pandemic or you are finally getting back with a hybrid model, you need to understand the HIPAA regulations and how to avoid pitfalls. From vaccination cards to Explanations of Benefits, to OSHA's new emergency temporary standards, employee health information should be handled with caution and employers who sponsor health plans are under special obligations. While it is not only healthcare providers who are governed by HIPAA, it is a common misconception that all health information falls within its ambit. Join Archer's Healthcare Team for a discussion of the applicability of HIPAA and recent cases involving HIPAA violations by providers and their business associates, as well as how all entities can effectively protect against them.
