

Community

Giving Back.

At Archer, our dedication to the law is mirrored by a deep sense of commitment to the communities in which we live and work. Members of the firm value the opportunity for positive community engagement. We donate energy, time and resources to a wide range of worthy causes and community partnerships, from professional organizations and associations to charities and other not-for-profits dedicated to advancing the public good. Our attorneys and professional staff have a voice in the causes we champion, and volunteer with the charities and community organizations we support. We translate compassion into actions, bringing energy and enthusiasm to every initiative we undertake.

Archer provides support in several ways, including financial contributions, leadership, volunteering efforts, and pro bono representation. Our attorneys also share their leadership, support and knowledge through service on a number of boards and committees of law and bar-related organizations, and by teaching and lecturing at some of the area's leading law schools and in respected professional development programs.

We are ambitious, enthusiastic and united in a desire to giving back to our communities. Together, we've contributed hundreds of hours to helping others. We support dozens of charities and community-based organizations that align with our firm's and clients' core values, interests and community priorities. Our long-standing commitment to community service continues to be a vital part of who we are as lawyers and people.
