

Federal Trade Commission's Broad Noncompete Ban Suffered A Legal Setback

In the News

07.08.2024

The Federal Trade Commission's broad noncompete ban suffered a legal setback after a federal judge in Texas ruled against the agency on July 3rd. Partner Thomas Muccifori, chair of Archer's Trade Secret Protection & Restrictive Covenants Group and associate Amy Pearl provided insight on the ruling in the American City Business Journals article, "FTC Noncompete Ban Suffers Setback in First of Several Court Challenges," as well as in the IAM article, "FTC Non-Compete Rule "Arbitrary and Capricious," Court Rules." See below to read each article.

FTC Noncompete Ban Suffers Setback in First of Several Court Challenges

FTC Non-Compete Rule "Arbitrary and Capricious," Court Rules

Related People

Thomas A. Muccifori

Partner

✉ tmuccifori@archerlaw.com

☎ 856.354.3056

Amy E. Pearl

Associate

✉ apearl@archerlaw.com

☎ 856.857.2790

