Archer & Greiner P.C. ("Archer") is pleased to announce the launch of its Political Law & Compliance Practice Group, expanding the firm's capabilities in serving clients operating in today's highly regulated political and governmental environments. The new practice will be co-chaired by partners Jason Sena and David Weinstein, both of whom bring deep experience in state and local government relations, compliance, and public policy.

Christopher Gibson, Archer president, commented on the launch saying, "This new practice group reflects Archer's continued commitment to staying ahead of our clients' needs in a complex legal and regulatory environment. The Political Law & Compliance Group will further strengthen our ability to deliver high-level, strategic counsel to clients involved in all facets of the political process."

The multidisciplinary group will serve a wide range of clients across the state and beyond, including businesses, trade associations, nonprofits, political action committees, lobbying firms, candidates, political parties, contributors, and others engaged in the political and electoral process.

"Our Political Law & Compliance Group is a natural evolution of Archer's longstanding work advising clients at the intersection of law, public policy, and politics," said Jason Sena, Co-Chair of the group. "With heightened legal scrutiny and a rapidly changing regulatory landscape, clients need forward-thinking, practical guidance to stay compliant and achieve their goals."

David Weinstein, Co-Chair of the group, added, "Our team understands both the complexities of the law and the operational realities of political engagement. That combination allows us to deliver strategic, real-world counsel to help clients mitigate risk while navigating campaigns, elections, lobbying, and government processes."

The group will provide comprehensive legal counsel across the full spectrum of political law and compliance, including campaign activities, ballot initiatives, political advocacy, campaign finance, lobbying regulations, ethics requirements, government contracting, and investigations, at the federal, state, and local levels.

The launch of this practice comes at a pivotal moment as businesses and advocacy groups face increased oversight and enforcement involving campaign contributions, pay-to-play restrictions, lobbying disclosure, and political transparency.
