Archer expands its regional platform with a new Cape May County presence, anchored by three attorneys with deep roots in the community and established relationships throughout the region

Archer & Greiner, P.C. ("Archer") today announced the launch of a new office in Cape May Court House, New Jersey, marking another step in the firm's continued regional growth. The new location extends Archer's full-service legal capabilities to businesses, organizations, and individuals throughout Cape May County and surrounding communities.

Louis DeLollis and Lyndsy Newcomb, both longtime Cape May County residents, join Archer from Monzo Catanese DeLollis, P.C. where they developed established practices serving the region's business and residential communities. They will be based in the new office alongside Archer partner Alexis Batten, a public finance attorney and longtime county resident who has served clients in the region from the firm's Voorhees and Red Bank offices. Now based in Cape May County, Batten will be able to serve her home community, including the businesses and public entities she has long served, more directly. Her move further strengthens Archer's commitment to the County.

"Archer's growth has always been driven by our commitment to being where our clients need us," said Marc Rollo, president of Archer. "Expanding into Cape May County is a natural next step in our strategic growth throughout the region. We see tremendous opportunity to serve the businesses, individuals, and communities here, and we believe the best way to do that is to have attorneys who are part of those communities. Louis and Lyndsy have spent their careers building relationships and serving clients in Cape May County. With Alexis also joining them, we are bringing together attorneys who know this region and are invested in its future, backed by the full resources of Archer."

DeLollis focuses his practice on corporate and business law, commercial transactions, real estate, land use, and business succession planning. He advises corporations, closely held and family-owned businesses, emerging companies, and individuals on a broad range of business matters, including entity formation, mergers and acquisitions, financing, commercial agreements, real estate transactions, and development projects. He also represents clients in New Jersey liquor licensing matters and counsels individuals and families on estate and trust planning. He earned his J.D. from Rutgers Law School.

Beyond his legal practice, DeLollis has maintained a longstanding commitment to the Cape May County community. He serves as solicitor to both the Cape May County Chamber of Commerce and the Cape May County Education Foundation, and as treasurer of the Cape May County Chapter of Habitat for Humanity. He has also served as an attorney coach for the Middle Township High School Mock Trial Team and is a board member of the Middle Township Baseball Softball Association.

Newcomb focuses her practice on land use, planning and zoning, real estate, and environmental and regulatory compliance. She represents developers, businesses, property owners, and other clients in real estate transactions and development projects, guiding them from initial due diligence and property acquisition through site planning, land use approvals, and permitting, and regularly appears before municipal planning and zoning boards and county, regional, and state agencies on their behalf. She also advises restaurants, bars, marinas, and other hospitality and waterfront businesses on New Jersey liquor licensing matters, including the acquisition and transfer of licenses and the defense of alleged violations. A member of the Cape May County Bar Association, Newcomb also serves on the Cape May County Judicial and Prosecutorial Appointments Committee. She earned her J.D. from Villanova University School of Law.

On joining Archer, DeLollis said, “Having spent my career in Cape May County, I understand how important it is for individuals and businesses here to have access to experienced counsel who knows the local community. Archer gives us the support of a full-service firm with deep experience across many practice areas, allowing us to address more of our clients’ needs and connect them with additional resources as their businesses and personal interests evolve. I’m proud to be part of what we can accomplish for our clients and the Cape May County community.”

“Joining Archer is an exciting opportunity to bring more to the clients and community we have served throughout our careers,” said Newcomb. “We’ve always valued the relationships we’ve built here and the chance to work with people and businesses we know. As part of Archer, our clients can turn to us for a far wider range of legal needs while continuing to work with attorneys they know and trust, right here in Cape May County.”

Archer’s new Cape May County office will be located at 1 Enterprise Drive Suite E, in Cape May Court House, New Jersey.
