Overview

Terry concentrates his practice in the area of corporate and commercial banking law, with a particular emphasis on mergers and acquisitions, commercial lending transactions and the impact of New Jersey's Industrial Site Recovery Act on business transactions. Terry has provided representation for the purchases/sales of privately-owned businesses, ranging from family-owned businesses to large privately-owned entities, with particular emphasis in the transportation (trucking and logistics) and food industries (manufacturing and co-packing). Terry works with clients on commercial lending transactions, counseling both national and regional financial institutions, as well as privately-owned and publicly-owned borrowers in documenting their primary lending facilities.

Terry also advises and directs businesses in the areas of entity selection, contract preparation/review, and corporate governance. Such representation has ranged from newly formed start-up operations to long established business entities, as well as foreign owned U.S. entities. Additionally, he has provided extensive advice on the potential applicability and impact of New Jersey's Industrial Site Recovery Act (ISRA) on business transactions, including sales, closures, mergers, acquisitions and reorganization.
