11.14.2011

Archer P.C. is once again the top United Way donor among professional services firms in Camden County, N.J.

Employees of the law firm raised more than $23,000 this fall for the United Way of Camden County (UWCC) 2011 campaign, more than any other firm that provides professional services such as legal, engineering and architectural. The amount raised represents an increase of approximately 15 percent from last year, when Archer, through its office in Haddonfield, was also the top professional services donor in Camden County.

"I am proud that our employees stepped up once again to help those in need by giving generously to the United Way, which plays such a vital role in our community," said James H. Carll, Chairman of the Board of Directors of Archer. "Through our strong support of the United Way's mission to improve lives by addressing underlying causes of societal problems, particularly in the areas of education, economic independence and health, we are helping make a positive difference in Camden County and beyond."

Archer has a long and proud history of supporting the United Way, both financially and through service. Firm co-founder F. Morse Archer Jr. was an original UWCC Trustee when the organization formed in 1942. Currently, Archer Partner Frances A. McElhill has served as a member of the UWCC Board of Directors for nearly a decade and is Chair of the Board's Audit Committee.
