

John C. Connell Appointed to Columbia Alumni Association Committee

Press Releases

10.10.2017

John C. Connell, a partner in Archer's Haddonfield office, was recently appointed by the Columbia Alumni Association (CAA) to its Associations and Clubs Committee (A&C). Mr. Connell received his Bachelors of Arts degree from Columbia University and is being recognized by the CAA and the A&C Committee as a result of his ongoing dedication and leadership in helping to build the University's alumni community.

In his new role, Mr. Connell will work to help strengthen the alumni leaders community, the alumni clubs and Shared Interest Groups, as well as provide the necessary expertise to help reach the A&C Committee goals.

The Associations and Clubs Committee fosters relationships among the CAA and affiliated associations and regional clubs of the University. With the goal of sharing best practices among the affiliated associations and clubs, the Committee supports leadership training for club leaders and provides operational support models and best practices for the benefit of all Columbia alumni groups.

Mr. Connell practices civil litigation as first-chair trial attorney in jury and bench trials and appeals in State and federal courts. His clients range from Fortune 100 companies to individuals in an array of complex commercial, employment, civil rights, communications law, health care and intellectual property matters. Mr. Connell's work has resulted in precedential reported opinions on issues of constitutional jurisprudence, as well as statutory and common law.
