Archer Law Partner John C. Connell has been named an “MVP” in Intellectual Property by Law360 for his role in Matal v. Tam, the groundbreaking U.S. Supreme Court trademark case decided last year.

Mr. Connell, who heads Archer’s Media & Communications Law and Appellate Advocacy groups, was awarded the distinction for successfully persuading the Court to rule unanimously that the federal government’s ban on offensive trademark registrations was unconstitutional, Law360 said in announcing the award.

Matal v. Tam was one of the most important cases considered by the U.S. Supreme Court last term. The Court’s decision is expected to have far-reaching effects on the government’s involvement in and regulation of trademark registration. One prominent case in particular, involving the PTO’s decision to revoke the trademark of the Washington Redskins football team, has already been impacted directly by the Court’s decision.

Mr. Connell successfully represented Simon Tam, lead singer of the Asian dance-rock band THE SLANTS, who sought and was denied federal registration of the band name by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office (PTO) in 2011. The PTO based its denial on a Lanham Act provision from 1946 that prohibited registration of disparaging trademarks. Tam took the case to federal court in 2015, arguing that the Lanham Act’s disparagement clause violated the First Amendment. Following an en banc Federal Circuit Court decision in 2016 that the disparagement clause was unconstitutional, the PTO appealed the case, petitioning in 2016 for a writ of certiorari.

Mr. Connell argued the case before the U.S. Supreme Court in January 2017, defending the Federal Circuit’s decision. On June 19, the Supreme Court affirmed in an 8-0 decision that Tam’s trademark was a form of free speech and thus was protected under the First Amendment. Archer provided pro-bono legal services to THE SLANTS since spring of 2015.

Constitutional law has been an interest of Mr. Connell’s throughout his 32-year career. “Constitutional law involves principles that have an impact on the structure and organization of society as a whole as well as the relationship between citizens and the government,” Mr. Connell told Law360.

Law360's MVPs are attorneys who have distinguished themselves from their peers over the past year through high-stakes litigation, record-breaking deals and complex global matters. A team of Law360 editors selected the 2017 MVP winners after reviewing more than 1,000 submissions.
