Panel: Black Tie Optional: The Eroding Formalities to Creating a Valid Will	Panel: Recent Developments Facing the Legal and Banking Communities
Archer Speaker: Melissa Dibble	Archer Speaker: Anthony La Ratta
Overview: Black's Law Dictionary defines "last will and testament" as "the instrument ultimately fixing the disposition of real and personal property at the testator's death." In every state there are certain formalities required to create a valid will. With the emergence of electronic wills and doctrines such a substantial compliance, the once strict formalities to creating a valid will are eroding. Wills on cell phones, iPads, and DVDs have been admitted to probate all over the world and this session will focus on these non-traditional wills and what practitioners (planners and litigators alike) need to know about this ever-changing landscape.	Overview: The National Conference of Lawyers and Corporate Fiduciaries (NCLCF) is a standing committee consisting of a select group of RPTE members who interface with members of the American Bankers Association during the year, most notably in the context of 1-2 annual joint meetings. In the past, access to those meetings had been exclusively limited to the members of the committee. For the third consecutive year, the NCLCF presents highlights of these recent discussions to the RPTE Section at large. This year's program will focus on two topics currently at the forefront of legal and banking industries.
